European Academy of Paediatrics calls for complete cease-fire in Syria for humanitarian aid

We, paediatricians from Europe, demand that the United Nations Security Council Resolution 2401, unanimously adopted on February 24th 2018, be applied to allow humanitarian aid with a complete cease-fire in Syria. According to the Syrian Observatory for Human Rights, 600 persons have been killed since February 18th, a quarter of them children. We ask that our European leaders use their influence to stop the ongoing battles, which target health facilities, civilians and children alike. A mere “part-time cease-fire” will not allow for successful humanitarian aid without endangering healthcare volunteers and the population. Our countries cannot stand idly while innocent children are massacred or left to starve.
